The mural on the fencing along Stirling Towers.

Mt Lawley artist Mel McVee has started work on her latest project, the fencing around the vacant Stirling Towers in Highgate.

The Department of Housing installed the fencing after announcing plans to demolish the building and redevelop the site.

In her artwork concept submission, Ms McVee said her mural work mostly dealt with lines and connection.

"As a Mt Lawley resident, I have always loved the architecture, history, native flora, fauna and community that surround the area and have created a concept that immortalise these ideas for the Stirling Towers mural," she said.

"The design has been created in two separate designs, with each one carved up into separate panels.

"This creates a 23-piece panel puzzle, creating a wall that is visually appealing, but can be also assembled to create a larger art piece." Native flora and fauna, as well as historic architecture and a map of the Highgate area, will all be included in the mural.
